To-day's Programmes.

No concert of the musical festival will be more popular and more largely attended than that of this afternoon, when the children will sing. Mr. Walter C. Meicer, fithe director of the children's chorus has trained the 200 little song-birds in his charge to a high degree of morit and all who attend this afternoon may expect a musical feast of the highest order. Besides the children's part of the programme, such soloists as Miss Ormsby, soprano; Mr. Albert Quesnel, will be heard.

The night programme will be one of the best of the entire festival. Some are eyen inclined to believe from the pregramme that it will be the banner night of the series. To-day's Programmes.

Movement on Foot to Have the Government Get Control of

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 20.—An expedition, headed by Representative William B. McKinley, of Illinois, and composed of members of the House of Representatives and members of the Cupitol press gallery, left Washington Saturday evening and visited Jamestown Island, the site of the first English settlement in America, the site of the Jamestown Exposition, Fort Monroe and Newport News. Mr. McKinley was the host, and his guests included Jewell A. Aubere, St. Louis Globe-Dennerati, Allen D. Alport News. Mr. McKinley was the host, and his guests included Jewell A. Aubere. Nominated By Acclamation.

Nominated By Acclamation.

The party left on the steamer Norfolk, of the Norfolk and Washington Steamboat Company's fleet, and journeyed to Fort Monroe, where breakfast was served at the Hotel Chamberlin. The meal had a deep political significance, aside from its more material importance, for it was then that Representative McKinney, of illinois, and Representative Maynard, of Virginia, were nominated by acclamation as candidates for President and Vice-President, respectively, on "the people's tieletet." Mr. McKinney accepted the responsibility tendered him and remarked that English civilization, starting at Jamestown, shad spread throughout this vast country. He hoped that his boom, started at the same point, would follow along the same lines.

The force of this remark was somewhat spoiled by Mr. McKinley, who suggested that as it had taken the civilization in question nearly 200 years to reach its present height he didn't think much of Mr. McKinney's chances in 1908 unless the boom moved a trille more rapidly.

Tallowing the impromptu convention the boom moved a trine more rapidly. Following the impromptu convention the party boarded the steamer New York in the guest of, SuperIntendent Rogers, of the line, and Journeyed to Jamestown Island, some thirty odd miles up the James River, where several hours were spent in viewing the recently excavated rulns of the first American settlement of English-speaking people.

Ground Rich in Relics.

Ground Rich in Relics.

The visit to the island was a most interesting one, for although the surface indications of ancient Jamestown are comparatively few, it was very apparent that the ground is a rich treasury of relics of the past, for Jamestown is a veritable burled city, and the plow and spade unearth memorials which recall with startling vividness the days of John Smith and other inthers of the colony. Pieces of armor, a halberd, sword hilts, apiked balls, gold, silver and copper colons, a pewter basin and berd, sword hitis, spiked balls, gold, silver and copper coins, a pewter basin and other domestic utensils, small white and red clay pipes in which tobacco was first enjoyed by the white men, glass bottles beautifully iridescent from long burial in the earth, glass beads striped like gooseberries, fragments of stained glass from the old church widows and bits of charcoal, receiling Jamestown's flery trials, are a few of the articles that have already been exhumed.

It is probable that a large preportion of visitors to the Jamestown Exposition, which will be held up on the promontory at Newport News, will undoubtedly journey to Jamestown Island, which is, in fact, the main point of interest connected with the proposed exposition.

Ownership of the Property.

Ownership of the Property. The island has passed through the hands of many owners, some of whom, manifested little regard have manifested intel regard for its associations. In 1892, however, it was purchased by the late Edward Everett Harney and his wife, Mrs. Louise J. Barney. The latter had the island cleared up, took measures to preserve the ruins and made many improvements, and, finally in 1893, donated twenty-two and one-half acres at the western end to the Association for the Preservation of Virginia antiquities. A movement is under way to have the government gain control of the entire island, in connection with the exposition appropriation and hold it in perpetuity as a national park under Federal supervision.

After spending some time on the island the party returned to Norfolk and came up the river to Washington, arriving here this morning at 7 o'clock.

"I can say nothing," was all he would say. Such a reply in itself may be regarded as partial confirmation of the rumer.

The Associated Press is in a position to state that Count Witte is utterly disquested with the turn of events, and especially with the possibility that the Europeov might for redeem his promise to dismiss Minister Durnovo before the assembling of the National Parliament, and that within a few days the Premier offered the Emperor the alternative of Durnovo or himself. Until recently the name of Mary Jane Lynn, of Willemsport, Pa., was on the list, but she has died. One of the most inveresting of these venerable women is Mrs. Palmiter, whose father, Jonathan Woolley, served with the Vermont patriots, who took part in the campaign against Burgoyne, was a sufferer at Velley Forge and during a battle was badly wounded and left on the field for dead. Mrs. Palmiter is eighty-four years old, and suffers from an injury sustained three years ago, but she retains her faculities to a wonderful degree, hears as well as ever, is a great reader and keeps herself informed on all the important events of the day. She is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Mohawk Chapter, which presented her with a gold spoon, certificate and badge that she prizes highly.—New York Herald.
